Hospital escapes budget axe

MILLS MEMORIAL Hospital is going ahead with renovation plans to save on labour costs despite news its budget won't be cut this year.

Hospital chief executive officer Michael Leisinger said the estimated $1 million renovation is needed and there is no guarantee its budget won't be cut next year or the year after.

The hospital had been expecting a budget cut of up to $500,000 this year, a factor that would have led to layoffs.

Its renovation of the main nursing floor would have centralized services and reduced the number of people it needed on the floor.

"While we're certainly pleased the budget won't be cut we have to be ready for the future," Leisinger said last week.

"Just because there's a budget freeze this year that doesn't end the pressure. We've got to think in more than one year increments."

Premier Glen Clark announced last week that overall hospital expenditures will rise by 2.5 per cent this year — approximately $71 million — and that no hospital will get less money than it did last year.

Details of what that means weren't released last week and the effect on individual hospitals won't be known until the province introduces its next budget. No date for that has been set.

Leisinger noted that even a budget freeze means a cut because of inflation.

"We are still looking at a $150,000 to $200,000 deficit this year. And even with inflation at one or two per cent, that's a couple of hundred thousand dollars will still have to find," he said.

"We're still going to face pressure for better utilization and efficiencies."

Another unknown factor is the result of contract negotiations now underway between hospital workers and the provincial government.

Wage increases, if any, will have to come from the hospital's frozen budget and that could ultimately affect the workforce, said Leisinger.

"If there's a freeze in wages, that would be good news and put us in good shape. But you have to remember that 80 per cent of our budget is spent on wages and benefits," he added.

The hospital wants to begin renovations this summer and have them completed by early winter.

When finished, the main nursing floor will have a revamped nurses' station with the various wards grouped around it.

There will still be the same number of beds — 42 — as there are now but some will be set aside for use in case of emergencies or in times of patient overflow.

If Mills Memorial's budget is frozen this year, it'll be the fifth straight year this has happened.

To date that's resulted in two series of bed closures and layoffs which have already trimmed the hospital's wage pack-by more than $1 million.

Bench could be home of new high school

By CRIS LEYKAUF

A HIGH school on the bench.

That's where a replacement school for Skeena Jr. Secondary might be located.

Yesterday MLA Helmut Giesbrecht announced the education ministry had given nearly $1 million to the Terrace school district to plan a replacement for Skeena.

Overcrowded and now 43 years old, Skeena's been "called one of the two worst (schools) in the province," said Giesbrecht.

A recent audit of Skeena showed it is well below adequate on many key factors including ventilation and meeting the building code.

Right now Giesbrecht said the school district is considering two locations for the new school, on the existing site and on a piece of undeveloped land on the bench which stretches from the end of Mountain Vista Drive across to Soucie.

"It's a 28 acre parcel," said trustee Stew Christensen.

That's where the school district had been considering building a new elementary school. "There is room to put two schools on it," said Christensen.

The land is owned by the lands ministry but the school district currently has first right of refusal.

Christensen didn't know how much the school district might have to pay for it, but said there is a possibility it could be bought for $1.

Some of the property nearby on Soucie is farmland, but city planning allows for that land to become residential.

"Today it's farmland, but tomorrow" said Christensen.

The school district estimates it will cost about $22 million to build a replacement for Skeena.

Right now school board officials aren't sure whether the school will be for Grades 8-10, as it is today, or whether it will become a middle school, serving Grades 7-9.

That middle school option might be part of a grander plan the school board has for the area.

They're also looking at putting in a senior high school in Thornhill.

Another decision the education ministry has to make is how it will pay for the Skeena replacement.

In order to pay for construction costs, the school district might decide to sell the parcel on which Skeena now sits.

"It's a pretty substantial piece of property," said Christensen about Skeena Junior's present location on Munroe St. and Walsh Ave.

He doesn't know how many acres are there, but admits the school district could earn quite a bit of money, if it could sell the land as residential lots.

However, he added that it was too soon to tell what might happen, or where construction money might come from.

"A committee has been struck to look at where we want to put a new school," said Christensen. That committee will have to consider what the public wants.

"It could create a fairly good political problem, if Skeena is moved to the bench," said Giesbrecht.

"Would the public think it's a good move to bus students up there?"

Say a big hello to 615

IT'S NOT a mistake.

If you've seen some new local phone numbers popping up that begin 615, they're legit.

As of Friday only 12 of the new phone numbers had been issued, but you can expect to see a lot more of them.

B.C. Tel spokesman Ed Clark said the new 615 prefix was introduced in Terrace in March.

He said Terrace's 635- and 638- prefixes are simply running out of space and a new one had to be created.

Much of the demand for new lines is to hook up fax machines and computers.

But the introduction of cellular phone service here in December and a new surge of demand for phone lines forced the introduction of the third Terrace prefix.

The other big change for this year will be the change in area code to 250 for all parts of B.C. outside the Lower Mainland.

The new 250 area code for this region starts up in October, but there will be a period of grace through until April, 1997. During that time, if you dial 604 in northern B.C. you'll get through but you'll also get a recording reminding you of the change.

■ Signs of spring

THESE TWO LITTLE lambs are sure signs that spring is here to stay. Young Kelsey Hamer was helping her grandmother Jean Hamer bottle feed these two little guys named Eanie and Meanie. (Their sibling, the third triplet, is named Minie.) So far Jean has had 21 lambs born on her farm, north of town.

Nisga'a to charge for land claim info

THE NISGA'A are showing their business acumen once again by hosting a $1,000-a-person three-day seminar on their land claim deal.

Nisga'a Tribal Council spokesman Nelson Leeson said the May 6-8 seminar at the Vancouver Trade and Convention Centre will detail the agreement-in-principle, how negotiators reached it, and what the future holds.

Leeson said they heard about various agencies and institutions looking at hosting conferences on the deal.

"We got to thinking why shouldn't it be us? We were actually in the room."

He said profits from hosting seminars and consulting will be used to pay down the nearly $30 million the Nisga'a have spent negotiating for the past 20 years.

"We think it's an ideal way to put money towards paying for those years of negotiations," he said.

Those negotiating costs, which have been bankrolled by the government, are to be deducted from the $190 million cash part of the Nisga'a land claim settlement.

The provincial government spent $3.1 million since joining the Nisga'a negotiations in 1990. The federal government — which was at the negotiating table much longer — spent more than $6 million.

The seminar includes breakfasts and all materials, including a video tape, and a political panel. There's also a $150-a-plate banquet offered to those attending.

"There's a lot of interest from the corporate and business side," he added. "A lot of them are interested in how we're going to do business with them later."

Leeson said they may do similar seminars in other places, noting there have been expressions of interest from Kamloops, Vernon and Victoria.

Asked if the Nisga'a will hold a public meeting to better explain their plans to a Terrace audience, he said they're considering it.

But he said the Nisga'a would likely still charge a fee for an appearance in Terrace, although it might not be as high as in Vancouver.

"We've got a bill that's $30 million and running — we've got to make something out of it," he said. "Maybe it won't be such a big charge up here."

Leeson said Nisga'a efforts to organize joint ventures will benefit all northwesterners.

"What we're doing is enticing business to come to the northwest — that's good for everybody up here."

RCMP axe 21 vehicles

NEARLY HALF of the vehicles stopped in RCMP roadblocks in Terrace and Thornhill on Saturday were condemned.

A total of 50 vehicles were examined and 21 of the those were condemned. Sixty charges were laid, and six vehicles were towed.

The inspections turned up a number of flaws; including cracked and broken frames, no frames, broken suspensions, large holes in floors, excessive rust, defective steering and bad brakes.

Man faces gun charges

TERRACE RCMP say alcohol was definitely involved in a domestic incident in Thornhill Monday night which has one man facing a charge of attempted murder.

Police arrested a 42-year-old man at a home on Queensway after getting a call about a man with a gun in a home there.

Staff Sgt John Veldman says one shot was fired from a 20-gauge shotgun.

There was one woman in the house at the time. She was not injured. Veldman says the two were involved in a relationship.

The man is also facing two counts of assault, pointing a firearm, discharge of a firearm and unsafe storage of a firearm. He is being held in custody.

Husband run over twice

A WOMAN is alleged to have twice driven over her retired husband when he stood in the driveway in front of the car to block her exit.

RCMP Staff Sgt. John Veldman said the bizarre incident took place on the 4800-block of Scott Ave. last Tuesday.

The 68-year-old man tried to prevent his wife from driving drunk, Veldman said, and somehow ended up being run over.

When the woman realized what she'd done, she reversed direction — and ran over him again, Veldman said.

The husband was taken to Mills Memorial Hospital for rib and possible leg fractures, Veldman said.

A woman faces charges of impaired driving causing bodily harm and failing to provide a breath sample. She appears in Terrace provincial court May 24.

Youth hits police car

A 17-YEAR-OLD Terrace girl is facing a charge of impaired driving after an RCMP vehicle was side-swiped early Sunday morning.

Staff Sgt. John Veldman says a police cruiser was heading northbound on Eby Street just after midnight when it was hit by a southbound Suburban which had made a wide turn out of Davis.

The police car sustained about $2,000 damage. The girl will appear in court in May.

Fight victim in hospital

A 19-YEAR-OLD Nanaimo man is in Vancouver General Hospital after a drunken fight in Terrace early Sunday morning.

RCMP say the man was fighting with an 18-year-old Terrace youth in the Esso parking lot at Lakelse and Emerson at about 3 a.m.

He received some severe blows to the head and is in serious condition with skull fractures.

Motel union bid fails

WORKERS AT the Terrace Slumberlodge will not become part of a union.

The employees voted at the Terrace Access Center back on March 1, and the 14 ballots were opened Monday at the Labour Relations Board in Vancouver.

Seven people had voted in favour of joining the Hotel, Restaurant and Bartenders Union, and seven were against it. The union had needed 51 percent of the vote.

"It's really, really disappointing," says union business agent Wilma Redpath. "It's sad for the people who thought they should have union representation."

A number of Slumberlodge employees signed union cards in February.

Shortly after that they were laid off, but hotel management denied that had anything to do with the card signing.

The workers were called back to work ten days later, but Redpath doubts many of them are still there.

"They were called back," she says. "But they were harassed and most have quit."

Redpath says the union does not have any plans to try and work with Slumberlodge again.

Slumberlodge manager Bob Reid says he's happy with the outcome of the vote.

"It's business as usual," he says.

But he denies management ever opposed the process. "We weren't ever against it," he says.

Nisga'a forums planned

TWO MORE public forums on the Nisga'a agreement-in-principle are to take place in the northwest today and tomorrow.

Today's session starts at 7 p.m. at the Hudson Bay Lodge in Smithers.

Thursday evening's session starts at 7 p.m. at Room 15 at Northwest Community College in Kitimat.

The two public meetings will include open question-and-answer sessions, but they'll also break up into small workshop groups for part of the meeting.

The small groups will each focus on a separate part of the deal — fishing and hunting, forestry, and self-government.

They may be the first public meetings in the north at which all three negotiating teams are present.

Federal and provincial representatives are expected to attend, and there's some possibility Nisga'a leaders will show up as well.

The sessions are being organized by the provincial aboriginal affairs ministry and are co-sponsored by Northwest Community College.

■ Housing work begins

WORK WAS well underway at the site of the new 18-unit addition to the Skeena Kalum Housing development off Haugland Ave. last week. The society held a ground-breaking ceremony on Saturday afternoon to mark the occasion. That's contractor Candido Guerreiro, of Genuine Contracting — one of the subcontractors to general contractor Polo Construction.

Search on for wiley coyote

A COYOTE'S on the lam in Thornhill, and conservation officers are asking the public to be on the look out for him.

The coyote in question is easy to spot, because he limps along on three legs, says conservation officer James Hilgemann.

The coyote bit a local man a few weeks ago, and so far has eluded co's efforts to trap him.

"The man was feeding the coyote a sausage roll," said Hilgemann, when the coyote bit the man's fingers, leaving "major lacerations."

It's very unusual for a coyote to attack a human, but Hilgemann said this is an unusual case. The coyote, who lives in the Petro Can area in Thornhill, and locals have been feeding it.

"He's lost his fear of humans," said Hilgemann. "He's conditioned to hand feeding."

People in the area say the coyote will come right up to them and has also been known to grab shopping bags of food right out of their hands.

Last week conservation officers put out traps to try and catch the coyote, so they could test him for rabies, but were unsuccessful.

That means the man who was bitten was forced to go through a series of unpleasant rabies shots, to make sure he won't get the disease.

The odds are slim the coyote has rabies; there are currently no documented cases of rabies in the province.

Conservation officers have now removed the traps, so they don't accidentally capture dogs and other wildlife.

However, they are asking the public to call them immediately if they see a three-legged coyote.

During the day you can call 638-6530, and after office hours call 1-800-663-WILD.

Hilgemann added that this case illustrates why people should not feed wildlife.

News In Brief

Hospital talks stall as unions take strike vote

MEMBERS OF three B.C. unions have voted overwhelmingly in favour of striking to back contract demands. And that means picket lines could be going up at Mills Memorial Hospital.

Members of the Hospital Employees Union, B.C. Government Employees Union, and the International Union of Operating Engineers across the province have voted 81 per cent in favour of going on strike if necessary. There are 185 members of the three unions at Mills.

Bargaining has been ongoing since the end of February. Mediator Vince Ready became involved at the end of March, when contacts for the three unions expired.

The key issues are job security and protection of health care. The province-wide strike vote was carried out from April 1-12. Negotiations involving the B.C. Nurses' Union are still ongoing.

Workers strike a deal and it freezes wages

IT COULD be a first for government employees in this province. A contract settlement that includes a wage freeze until November of next year.

A tentative settlement has been reached between the B.C. Government and Service Employees' Union (BCGEU) and the Public Service Employee Relations Commission (PSERC) on the contract covering 32,000 provincial government employees.

BCGEU president John Shields says the deal provides for improved job security and moderate wage and benefit increases.

Government employees will get a 1 per cent wage increase effective November 30, 1997. Results of the ratification vote will be known early next month.

No change in plan to close weather station

THERE'S BEEN no change in the plans to close most of the weather stations in the province, including the one at the airport here, by next year.

The three people at the airport weather office are either being offered severance packages or the opportunity to move to open jobs elsewhere, says Gary Wells, the man in charge of weather stations in B.C. and the Yukon.

"The closure is still scheduled to take place by the end of March 1997," said Wells last week.

Only Vancouver and Kelowna in B.C. and Whitehorse in the Yukon will remain as manned weather stations in the region.

Wells said a series of automated phone systems will be put in place so people can receive weather information.

And, automated weather equipment is being installed in those stations where closures are planned so that temperatures and weather conditions can be gathered and sent elsewhere for processing.

At the altar

WILL ORENDA Forest Products be left at the altar once again?

Last year Orenda, all dressed up in wedding finery and clutching a bouquet of flowers, got into the church and took a couple of steps down the aisle before the groom, a New York-based consortium, put the ring back in the pocket and abandoned the ceremony.

That consortium wanted to use Orenda's wood as part of the base product to re-open a closed pulp and paper mill at Gold River on Vancouver Island.

There was never any official reason given other than suggestions that then-forests minister Andrew Petter wouldn't bless the union. He was under a lot of pressure to not approve a licence transfer that would see Orenda's wood leave the northwest.

Back then Repap played the jealous boyfriend, saying it had enjoyed a previous liaison with Orenda in that it used and needed Orenda's wood for its Prince Rupert pulp mill.

So when Orenda failed to cement its union with the out-of-town New York groom, the company went back on the hunt for a partner.

And it was no surprise that Repap appeared as a likely suitor. Everybody's known for years there are too many mills chasing too few sources of wood supply. Repap may be the biggest forest products company in the northwest but it is also the most vulnerable for it gobbles up far more wood than it has under its own licence.

Repap also faces a loss of wood due to the Nisga'a Agreement in Principle. It has a deal now to buy wood from Orenda but that runs out in two years, meaning that a takeover of Orenda would keep that supply coming in and place it under Repap control.

Forests minister Dennis Streifel will hold public meetings throughout the northwest to gauge public opinion on the proposed Repap buy of Orenda and its licence.

He'll look at a number of factors including corporate concentration, community stability, value to the provincial Crown should more wood be taken under Repap control. He'll examine the impact on small business operators and the service industry on having to do business with primarily one big player.

In the end, Mr. Streifel will more than likely approve the deal. Orenda received its wood licence in 1985 in the Stewart-Meziadin area under the condition it open some type of wood processing facility. That hasn't happened. It didn't happen either with two other companies who received licences. One company was taken over by West Fraser and the other by Repap.

Mr. Streifel will recognize that the existing wood processing facilities in the northwest need a security of supply that outranks the idea of having more diversified ownership and use of the wood resource.

In the end, Orenda will get its wedding. It won't be of the fancy type with a big splash reception and romantic honeymoon. Rather, it'll be the shotgun version.

Sweet deal turns out sour

VICTORIA — If I decide to leave journalism, which has sustained me fairly well for 35 years, although it never made me rich, and graze the lucrative field of consulting, some politicians and readers might consider sweetening the pot with a farewell gift just to get me out of their hair.

As for severance pay from the unfortunate publishers and editors who run my columns at considerable risk to their reputations, a swift kick in the posterior would probably be my just reward.

Not so for friends and insiders of political organizations, called parties, in this case the New Democratic Party of British Columbia.

Consider Connie Munro, chief appeal commissioner for the Workers' Compensation Board.

After serving in her position for about three years, Connie has decided to leave for reasons unknown. As an old and trusted friend of the NDP, she might have feared the outcome of the next election and decided it was better to get the hell out now.

FROM THE CAPITAL

HUBERT BEYER

Nothing wrong so far. If the lady wants out, she should be able to do so without being subjected to carping from the likes of me, but there's a rub. Connie gets $300,000, along with the fond farewell wishes from her NDP friends.

Now, I've always been under the impression that severance pay applies when someone gets fired before their contract expires. Ms. Munro is leaving of her own accord.

The Workers' Compensation Board came up with a neat excuse for the windfall the NDP secured for Ms. Munro. She will be prohibited from accepting work related to the WCB field for 18 months, and since this is her field of expertise, she should be compensated for this potential loss of income. Ergo: give the lady 0.3 of a million dollars, so she won't end up on welfare.

I've called premier Glen Clark intelligent, sharp, even brilliant, but I'm beginning to have second thoughts. Rarely has a new premiere done so many stupid things in such a short time as Clark has.

The attempted ouster of Conflict of Interest Commissioner Ted Hughes and the ill-advised and somewhat premature appointment of David Mitchell as his successor was a folly hard to beat, and the premier came away from that scrap with severe bruises.

Cutting welfare rates and relieving the poorest of the poor of $49 a month was heartless and didn't win him any favours with traditional NDP supporters and very few accolades from opponents.

Playing musical chairs with the public service by ostensibly laying off thousands of people, most of whom found other positions in the public service, was a deception that didn't work.

And giving a political friend a $300,000 golden handshake for three years of work is obscene.

What on earth happened to the NDP? What happened to their lofty ideals? What happened to their promises, one of which was "no more favours for friends and insiders?"

Every government plays the pork-barrel game. And to some degree it must, because only a foolish premier would seek out political opponents for jobs that demand some loyalty. But the NDP, which has always professed to abhor political appointments, has raised pork-barrelling to an art form.

No government I have ever reported and commented on has appointed so many friends and insiders to high positions as the NDP.

And that rubs a lot of people, with the possible exception of Connie Munro, the wrong way.

Doing it just a bit differently

SOON TERRACE cemetery may have its first columbarium, a granite wall 30 inches thick with foot square compartments to store urns filled with cremated remains or as they're called in the trade, cremains.

For those of us who suffer claustrophobia, the specter of forever residing in a vault only twelve inches square is a spooky prospect. A niche would be equally confining to someone with an ego. We might prefer to be sprinkled over open space.

At least one person — not six pallbearers — could do the job. Cremation at 2000 degrees reduces the average body to seven pounds of white ash.

Advantages of a columbarium are obvious. No mantelpiece urn to polish before relatives visit. No wasting of fine wood for a coffin. No arable land held fallow.

Ashes may be placed in any urn, so long as it's not made of wood. Mice aren't supposed to get into a columbarium but have been known to. When they do, wooden urns and their mainly bone calcium content prove irresistible. Mice devour both.

Vaults will be closed in by granite doors locked with a special Allen wrench. The wrench will be kept on a hook at the funeral home. Each niche door will have chiseled into it an identifying inscription like that on a gravestone. How else would we know when we'd found our niche?

Chiseled by a stone mason from a six by five foot solid slab of granite, a columbarium has no cracks into which a vandal could pry a tire iron. And a vandal would need a loader to disturb it from its concrete pad. But its polished surface could be scratched or spray painted.

Filing cremains in a vault may be accompanied by a religious service resembling a burial complete with minister and mourners. Or the family may choose to inurn the cremains informally, privately.

With Canada's aging population — especially Terrace's attraction to seniors from all over the province — a 48 vault columbarium may soon be filled. Then another separate columbarium will be lifted into place by crane. To build on top of the first one would resemble a bird colony. The word columbarium comes from columba meaning dove.

You'd expect niches to be of three sizes — regular for average folk, smaller, and larger. No doubt the Charter of Rights and Freedoms frowns on that as well as any notion of prestige in occupying an upper niche versus the bottom row.

Addition of a columbarium to Terrace's cemetery infuses new spirit into the debate about how to dispose of a body. No longer will surreptitiously sprinkling cremains around the lilacs be the only alternative to traditional burial six feet down.

& Highlights from the music festival

Centre stage

THE ARTS are centre stage in Terrace, as the Music Festival winds up to its conclusion on April 20.

Approximately 4,000 from throughout the northwest are competing in the festival in this its 32nd year. They come from as far west as the Queen Charlotte Islands and as far east as Prince George.

Adjudicators from throughout B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan are judging the students, and encouraging them to strive for excellence in a variety of disciplines.

Over the next few days audiences can choose between viewing piano, speech arts, ballet and tap.

But since you can't see everything at once, we thought we'd share some images from the festival.

Clockwise from the top Sarah Palahicky performs the bouncy piece, "Playful Puppy." The Caledonia choir performed at the Pentecostal Church on Thursday. The Terrace Community Band, directed by Jim Ryan, gave a great rendition of the 1812 Overture, complete with cannons and church bells on Saturday night.

The adjudicators seemed to really enjoy their job. Most are professional musicians and artists, and relished the chance to come to the festival. Pictured here are Dennis Tupman, George Roberts and Stephen Smith. And lastly Leanne Derry and Cydney Rusch performed a goldfish duet for ballet adjudicator Jackie O'Kell.

Well kept secret

EVERYONE talks about Gala Night as being one of the highlights of the Pacific Music Festival, but there's another event you won't want to miss.

That's the night of the scholarship competition — Friday, April 19 at the REM Lee Theatre.

Competition starts at 6:30 p.m. with junior and intermediate categories. That's followed by the senior category at 8:15 p.m.

Adjudicators have chosen the best from the festival in piano, strings, vocal, speech arts, jazz dance, ballet, brass, woodwind and guitar. Three major scholarship will be awarded this night. Tickets for the scholarship night are $5 at Sight and Sound or at the door.

MP's Martian quest called "ridiculous"

Dear Sir:

I would like to thank you for Jeff Nagel's article "MP heads off into space" which appeared April 10. In it Skeena MP Mike Scott suggested people list themselves as "Martians" to protest the census question on racial origin.

That's the great thing about Mike Scott. You don't have to criticize him. All you have to do is quote him and he looks plenty ridiculous and offensive.

I have this to say to Mike Scott: People are different. We have different colours of skin, different languages, different histories, different body sizes... in short, different everything. It is impossible to be color blind when hiring. It is only possible to pretend to be and this pretension is a lie.

Picturing the scenario of walking into a government office that was staffed solely by people of Chinese or East Indian background, regardless of their academic or other qualifications, I must honestly admit I would be more comfortable being served by someone who would understand my own culture, language, values and influences.

I recognize and respect that people of Gitksan, Wet'suwet'en, Latin American, African or whatever cultural group you wish to name would like the same privilege.

By taking census data on ethnic origin, we can help all people to be served in sensitive caring appropriate way when they are in need of government services.

So, I will not put "Martian" as my ethnic origin on my census and I hope other people do not either. Census takers are paid by the completed census form and not very well at that. All you will do is waste their time and make their work a lot harder.

When Mike Scott says, "all are equal," he is really saying that he wants the existing discrepancies of power and influence to continue. I disagree totally with Mike Scott!

Feds get transport slap

An open letter to:
The Hon. Doug Young
Minister of Transport
Ottawa, Ontario

Dear Sir:

I object to your studies of transportation infrastructures along the Hwy16 corridor into the Port of Prince Rupert and Ridley Island, including a vehicular bridge scheme linking Digby Island to Prince Rupert.

Such studies are unfairly weighted to one North Coast maritime community versus those others i.e. Kitimat and Stewart. They are at cross purposes and contrary to your stated national transport policies on autonomous, stand on their own ports.

There is an impending provincial election and I resent provincial and federal tax monies of $100 million-plus being allocated to Prince Rupert's economic growth at the expense to our townships.

Here we have North Coast MLA Dan Miller, also the employment and investment minister and deputy premier, who is essentially in control of all provincial trade, investment, transportation, energy and B.C. crown corporation purse strings exhibiting unprecedented self-interest for his and his alone community.

The pipe dream of a bridge from Digby Island airport to Prince Rupert is again a disparaging bias against our communities when the Terrace-Kitimat airport, without question the more geographically located hub in the northwest, is struggling to even work out parity on a deal to assume airport lands from the provincial government, something Prince Rupert never even had to contend with.

If terminals at Ridley Island are struggling, even with increased throughput, then there are inherent flaws in the commodity mix and returns of investment which senior levels of government have no right to be meddling in. Free enterprise must be allowed to take its course naturally without political interference, pork barreling and feather bedding.

There's more at stake than meets the eye such as decisions around site selection for a proposed LNG shipping terminus (Kitimat vs. Prince Rupert). These have wide reaching implications when Ottawa and Victoria display favouritism in regional development.

The joint federal and B.C. participation in the extension of the Nisga'a Highway to Kincolith is a worthy and commendable endeavor, but I find this upcoming Transport Canada study irksome and reprehensible from an overall northwestern citizen taxpaying perspective of fairness and proper elected governance.

This demonstrates no continuity with your Transport 2000 policy for the nation and is devoid of regional equality and opportunities for reasoned growth in our area.

Road rebuild

KALUM STREET between Haugland and Keith Ave. was completely dug up last week as crews began work on the reconstruction of that road. Farko Contracting got the job. Other streets to be rebuilt this year include Twedle Ave., South Sparks, North Sparks, Terrace St., Park Ave. (from Emerson to Sparks), Walsh Ave. (4800 block), Dairy Ave., the Emerson St. parking lot, and recapping on parts of Kenney St., Clinton St. and the upper portion of Kalum St. hill.

Out & About

Highways contract up

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT is looking for companies interested in doing road and bridge maintenance on Hwy37 north of Meziadin.

The contract is now held by Yellowhead Road and Bridge (Stikine) Ltd. but expires this year.

Interested companies have until May 8 to put in their bids.

Yellowhead Road and Bridge is coming off of a two-year extension to a previous contract signed with the province in 1994.

The two-year option was extended to companies in 1994 considered to have met or exceeded their contract requirements.

Yellowhead Road and Bridge took over the contract in the early 1990s after the provincial government took the work away from another firm.

Unitel pulling out

UNITEL IS gradually pulling equipment and workers out of northwest communities in order to centralize services in Prince George.

The move does mean job losses as the company converts to more modern technology.

A Unitel official last week said the movement of equipment and job cuts are affecting Terrace and Smithers.

This is the second major Unitel shift in a year. It sold various buildings and services to Westel, which is owned by B.C. Rail, in 1995.

Airport customs service pursued Terrace International?

YOU'LL BE able to fly to and from Alaska from here soon if efforts to get Canada customs service at the airport are successful.

Terrace economic development officer Ken Veldman says the city has a proposal in to provide customs service as needed using a Canada customs agent in Kitimat.

A charter flight from Alaska to Terrace right now would have to land at Prince Rupert first for a customs check.

Customs service here would allow direct flights to and from Alaska or even Seattle.

"Rupert's got it. Smithers has got it," Veldman said. "So it would put us on a more level playing field here."

Corporate flyers would likely make the most use of it — in particular mining companies, possibly improving Terrace's chances of developing as a regional mining centre.

Fresh fish freight exports are another possibility.

Smithers also enjoys charter flights in the winter of Alaskan tourists coming to ski at Hudson Bay Mountain.

"It's tough to tell what the demand is going to be," Veldman said.

Users of the international flyers would pay for it with a surcharge. At an estimated $50 per landing for the service, Veldman says it's still significantly cheaper than making a stop in Prince Rupert.

It's no surprise land claims controversy extends to all

Dear Sir:

Not surprisingly the conflict regarding the Nisga'a Agreement in Principle is still over land.

Industry sees any negotiations involving land as placing an encumbrance on their rights to tenure or their rights to access the resources.

Messages coming from provincial agencies based in Vancouver and claiming to represent local interests are doing their best to make a settlement more difficult. Their message seems to be that as long as we give the Nisga'a back the "sea of rotting stumps" and no forest tenure is affected, they will be happy.

This sounds surprisingly like they favour cash only settlements. We have heard that before from those who still can't believe that First Nations are more concerned about future generations of Nisga'a than immediate monetary benefit. Land is the key to their future.

Land is also important to the people of Kincolth who have expressed some opposition to the Nisga'a AIP. It is because the commonly held lands in the settlement do not include enough of their traditional territory.

This contradicts the principle of commonly held lands. Commonly held lands are held for all, not just for those whose traditional territory it was prior to a treaty settlement. A settlement involves compromise among the Nisga'a as well.

Listening to the comments from agencies like the Interior Lumberman's Association and the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, it is hard to distinguish some of the rhetoric from that so often promoted by the Reform party and now more recently by the Foundation for Individual Rights and Equality (FIRE).

For FIRE it is just a pity that they are more than 100 years too late. Perhaps if they had started their efforts when First Nations were herded out of their homelands onto small reserves — excluded from owning land and denied the right to vote on issues affecting their lands — FIRE might have some credibility today.

Tenant eviction protest

Dear Sir:

The recent decision of the Regional District of Kitimat-Stikine to shut down Helmut Reinert's unauthorized rental units reflects a lack of understanding of the acute affordable housing shortage in B.C.

In a community with a near-zero vacancy rate, and virtually no new rental housing construction, where will five tenants go? Other "illegal" rental units in the area may be their only option.

There are an estimated 100,000 illegal rental units in B.C. — most of them suites in houses — housing 20 per cent of all tenants in this province. This type of housing is an ideal alternative to apartment living for tenants living in urban areas.

It may be the only alternative to home-ownership for tenants living in many rural areas.

It is my understanding that Helmut Reinert provides his tenants with well-maintained homes at a rent they can afford.

At the very least the eviction of the Thornhill tenants will result in financial hardship. They are fearing the worst. Homelessness.

Zoning should be used as a tool to regulate land use, not exclude those who cannot afford to buy their own home from certain residential areas. Is there no room for compassion and fairness in local governance?

Fieldworker,
Tenants' Rights Action
Coalition,
Vancouver, B.C.

News In Brief

Police like new vehicle

FIELD TESTING by New Aiyansh RCMP of a 4X4 vehicle designed for the American military went very well.

Constable Brent Ayers said he and detachment members spent more than a week putting a Hummer through its paces on some of the worst roads in the area.

There were problems with tires on lava rock shale in the area but that was probably because the tire pressure was a little too low, he said.

"I think it would fit in very well where there isn't a lot of pavement. It would have a fast response time," said Ayers.

One officer from the New Aiyansh detachment took the Hummer to Prince Rupert late last week so senior officers there could take a look at it. It was due to be picked up over the weekend by the dealer who owns it and then taken to Stewart to some interested parties there.

BC Tel explains job cuts

BC TEL official Don Calder told council members recently that the loss of B.C. Tel jobs isn't restricted to Terrace.

Calder had been asked up earlier in the year to explain why 24 jobs were being cut in Terrace but the original appearance was put off.

More than 600 B.C. Tel employees have already taken up company offers of early retirement or severance packages, he said.

That means some of those scheduled to lose their jobs here will be able to transfer to openings in other parts of the province, Calder continued.

B.C. Tel employees had until April 12 to decide if they were going to take early retirement packages or severance packages offered them by the company.

The Terrace jobs are due to disappear by mid-October. Half of those involve people working in a commercial sales office based in Terrace.

Legal aid gets money

LAW CENTRES and other agencies operated through the B.C. Legal Services Society are back in business after avoiding a shut down of operations April 1.

The society spent $22 million in addition to the $101 million budget it received from the provincial government last year.

Society officials had threatened to stop taking new clients should its money dispute with the provincial government have continued.

Bear hunt rules set

GRIZZLY BEAR hunters will be heading into the woods under a different set of rules this season.

All grizzly bear hunting in B.C. will be on a limited entry basis starting this fall.

Shawn Sharpe at the fish and wildlife office in Smithers says there will likely be two hunts in the Skeena region this season - one in the fall, and another one in the spring.

He says hunters will have until about mid-June to enter their names in a lottery, and they'll be notified by early July if they've been chosen.

He's expecting about 460 authorizations to be awarded for the two hunts.

There were no limits last year and any qualified hunter who applied for a license was given one.

There are about 4,000 grizzlies in the Skeena region, and between 10,000 and 13,000 province wide.

He says the limited entry hunt is being done in hopes of stabilizing the grizzly population.

"Grizzly bears are slow to reproduce," he says.

"And their mortality rate is high."

Sharpe says research is ongoing to more accurately determine the number of bears in the region.

Hunt applications are available at many government offices and at any business which sells regular hunting and fishing licences.

In the meantime, environment minister Moe Sihota last week announced increased fines for those who poach bears, taking only the gall bladders for sale on the black market.

Tourism boss extolls what north has to offer

NORTHERN BC is a land flowing with milk and honey.

The opportunities are limitless and retail sales numbers are skyrocketing.

The unemployment rate is one of the lowest in Canada, and tourists are flocking here by the thousands.

A advertisement by the provincial tourism ministry?

No, but close.

It's a speech from small business and tourism minister Bill Barlee to the chamber of commerce here recently.

He said tourism in northern BC is up 21 per cent over last year.

"We're a cash cow," he says. "My ministry makes money hand over foot."

Three years ago, Barlee continued, B.C. was Number 48 on the world tourist destination market.

We're now number three.

He says European tourists are quickly discovering all the northwest has to offer.

"Europeans think it's magnificent."

He also told chamber members that northern B.C. saw the biggest increase in retail sales in all of Canada last year.

And Barlee stressed these are not government figures.

"I don't trust government figures," he says. "Why should you? These numbers are from the experts."

Schools discussed

AN EDUCATION trend sweeping other parts of Canada is the subject of a public forum Friday in Smithers.

Two speakers will discuss charter schools in the forum entitled "Expanding Choices Within Public Education."

Organized by the Parent Advisory Council (PAC) of Lake Kathryn school, the forum takes place at Muheim Elementary School in Smithers.

A charter school involves a principal, teachers and an elected parents' group setting educational objectives and overseeing operations. It follows education ministry guidelines.

The biggest difference is that money comes directly from the government to the school, bypassing the public school administration.

Once the school has a mission statement, the parents' council has the authority to hire the best team of teachers parents think can achieve their goal. Teachers would not be bound by contractual seniority, which is currently the situation in the public school system.

There is no legislation allowing charter schools in the province.

He says B.C. is investing more money in the film industry and adds for each dollar put in, 20 more are received.

But Barlee admits it's difficult to entice filmmakers to the northwest because there's no studio here.

However Terrace has been selected as the site for a new small business pilot project.

Within a couple of months a computer will be set up the BC Access Centre.

Small business owners will be able to use it free of charge to search for on-line information that may be help to them.

Three years ago B.C. was Number 48 on the world tourist destination market. We're now number three.

Barlee says this should be particularly useful for business owners looking to expand, or move into a different facet of the field.

On the expected provincial election call, Barlee says he'd prefer if it didn't happen until June.

"That would give the party more time to gather voters," said Barlee.

Council gives rezoning nod for mystery store proposal

COUNCILLORS unanimously voted last week to proceed with rezonings to pave the way for a large store on the south side of Keith Ave.

The proposed 37,000 square foot development, which remains a secret, would go in between Keefer and Cramer St. and extend south of Keith Ave. to Feeney Ave.

Residents along those streets showed up at a public hearing last week and voiced their opposition to anything that would increase traffic or noise in the neighbourhood.

"Traffic is going to increase no matter what you put in that development," said Keefer St. resident Leon Schulte. "You've already put in all the low-income housing right around the corner from us."

"I know you can't stand in the way of progress, but I don't believe I should have to stare at the back of a warehouse either."

Cramer St. resident Linda Lee told councillors any kind of large commercial development there would change the character of the neighbourhood.

"We are the ones living in the neighbourhood," she said. "We don't go away at the end of the day."

City officials noted the property is presently zoned multifamily residential and could be turned into apartment buildings — with potentially as much traffic and noise as the back side of a large retailer.

The proposed rezoning would change the southern third of the block to service commercial (C3) and would also change its designation in the Official Community Plan from multi-family (townhouse) to service commercial.

Residents said the change would eliminate the multi-family buffer between the commercial and R2 zones.

City planner David Trawin says the rezoning allows the entire block to be developed, opening up a large parcel of commercial land — which is in short supply in Terrace.

Councillors also maintain that they can impose strict conditions to buffer the store from homes with landscaping and to restrict access at the development permit stage.

Area resident Chris Cordis said he was surprised the public hearing wasn't going to deal with the type of store going into the property.

Property owner Glen Saunders remains tight-lipped about what is proposed.

Councillors and city staff maintain they don't know what's going in.

But officials from West Fair Foods don't deny the project is theirs, and said they will comment once the rezoning gets final approval.

That could happen as early as this coming Monday if the highways ministry has no objection.

West Fair operates Extra Foods grocery stores and Real Canadian Super Stores.

Overwaitea manager Dale Lufkin, who also spoke at the public hearing, said the secrecy is causing a lot of fear among his staff.

Although highways ministry planners have no objections to the rezoning, they are at odds with Saunders on the issue of access to the property off Keith Ave.

That could mean tougher hurdles for the project to overcome at the city's development permit stage.

Saunders has indicated ministry suggestions that Cramer St. and Keefer St. be closed off at the highway could scuttle the project.

Mall worker beaten

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES at the Skeena Mall are being flooded with calls from people who are concerned about a security guard who was beaten up there a couple of weeks ago.

Rick Booth, 43, was on duty March 29 when he was attacked by a teenager in front of the doors by the food court.

"I just went outside to check things out," Booth explains. "And I noticed a kid there who'd been banned from the mall property a while ago."

Mall manager Lynda Lafleur said the 19-year-old chronically used bad language and threatened people at the mall.

Booth says when he asked the teen to leave, the two got involved in a verbal confrontation.

"And then he hit me in the face," says Booth.

"He knocked my glasses off and then he kicked me a few times in the face when I was down."

At some point in the mele Booth also had his ring finger broken.

It's now in a splint and he won't be back to work until the end of the month.

Booth also suffered a bruised cheek and jawbone and two black eyes.

But he's quick to point out this is an isolated incident.

"Most of the teenagers at the mall are good," he says.

"I've heard a lot of them have been asking how I am. They like me and they know there are rules to follow."

Booth says he usually asks teens to move along if they've been hanging out in the mall for a couple of hours.

"I like to be friendly with everybody," Booth says. "I'm not going to be more aggressive because of this."

He says he wants his attacker charged and if he sees him near the mall again, he will call the police.

RCMP Staff Sgt. John Veldman says charges contemplated are assault causing bodily harm.

They have not yet been able to find the alleged attacker.

Man gets six months

A 25-YEAR-OLD Terrace man has been sentenced to six months in jail on drug charges.

Neil Leonard Strain has been found guilty of possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking and driving while prohibited.

In August of 1994 Terrace RCMP noticed a van Strain was driving had licence plates on it which belonged to a 1974 Comet.

But Strain didn't pull over immediately when asked to do so. Rather, he turned to the other side of the road, parked and ran into a nearby home on Kalum while carrying a small parcel. Police found him there, sitting in the living room.

The parcel, containing 29.9 grams of cocaine, was found in a closet.

Identification, digital scales and traces of white powder were found in a fanny pack which Strain had left behind in the house after police arrested him.

A search of van turned up a handgun and ammunition. Strain has been in custody since the incident.

During his trial, his 23-year-old brother Ben testified that both men were drug dealers. But he told the courts Neil didn't know what was in the package, and also didn't know about the gun in the van or about the changed licence plates.

And he said the scales were used to weigh protein supplements, not drugs.

Neil also took the stand in his own defence, but when the pair were finished testifying, judge Robert Errico had serious doubts about both of them.

In his judgment he writes "in assessing the evidence of the accused and his brother I have concluded that when the evidence would serve the interests of the accused, they would testify falsely."

He goes on to write "the evidence of both is convoluted...in some instances it is inconsistent with common sense."

In sentencing Strain to six months judge Errico noted the man had already been in custody for 18 months.

He also pointed out Strain has a history of criminal convictions, although this is the first one on drug charges.

Meanwhile the courts in Prince George have sentenced Ben Strain to two years in jail for conspiracy to traffic in cocaine.

He and 14 others were picked up in December 1994 as part of a conspiracy investigation in Prince George and Terrace.

Scott probed

SOMEONE's stockpiling political ammunition against Skeena MP Mike Scott.

One of the latest polls asking northwesterners about the Nisga'a land claim deal also probes their opinion of Scott.

CV Marketing Research staff first ask people how well they understand the deal, whether the government has done a good enough job getting information out about it, and what they'd change in it if they could.

Then pollsters ask whether respondents can name their federal Member of Parliament.

If they correctly answer "Mike Scott", they're then asked to rate Scott's performance on the land claim issue and give reasons.

Federal and provincial government officials deny commissioning the poll.

"That's not the sort of question government would ask I don't think," B.C. aboriginal affairs ministry spokesman Peter Smith said.

And here's a deal for you

BUY NOW or miss this amazing special offer.

Transport Canada's Bob Jones tried to make taking over the money-losing Terrace airport sound like a tremendous opportunity.

The city could actually make money on the takeover if it played its cards right, Jones told local business people at a chamber luncheon Thursday.

He said Transport Canada's business plan for the airport would eliminate the $200,000-a-year deficit by 2000.

But if the city took it over and wiped out the deficit sooner, it could pocket the $800,000 federal subsidy that will be extended to cover the airport operation for the next four years.

That money could then be put in a fund to cover eventual capital improvements like new buildings and runway maintenance. Critics of the airport-devolution plan say it doesn't provide enough cash for long-term capital works.

But he admitted the cost-cutting plan would mean a reduction in service at the airport. And there's also something of a gun to the city's head as it negotiates.

Jones said federal policy is to offer its small airports first to the province, then to local governments, then to non-profit boards and commissions, and then finally to individuals and companies.

"If the City of Terrace also says no, we will move down the hierarchy," Jones said. One way or another, he said, either someone else is going to own the Terrace airport by Mar. 1, 2000 or the airport will be closed.

The sooner it happens, the sooner the airports can work on becoming more viable.

"Think about getting control of your airport before your competitor gets control of his airport," Jones added.

The issue of competition is important because of the possibility that either the Terrace or Prince Rupert airport might have to close if there isn't enough business to sustain both.

Jones said the competition issue is most acute between airports at Comox and Campbell River, Kelowna and Penticton, and Prince George and Quesnel.

He said it is federal government policy not to pick sides in such issues, but to let the marketplace sort it out.

Terrace city officials want control of the airport, but they're holding out for the province to turn over control of 1,000 acres of land surrounding the airport to the city.

The province has said it will lease extra Crown lands around airports in exchange for a share of profits, but has yet to set out specific details of the policy.

The land could become a light industrial site whose tax base would then help pay for the airport operation.

In the next century, locals can expect to pay even more to fly than they do today.

It's expected most airports will have place surcharges on passengers that pass through to raise extra money.

But Jones said airport operating costs could go down somewhat this fall if requirements to maintain separate fire departments at small airports are eliminated as expected.

CBC transfers reporter

DECADES OF an official news presence for CBC Radio in Prince Rupert have ended with the transfer of its last news reporter there to Vancouver.

CBC Radio used to have a fully-fledged radio station in Prince Rupert and a staffed newsroom.

Both covered the northwest but that ended in 1988 when the CBC moved more than half of its employees out of Prince Rupert to bureaus in Prince George and Kelowna.

The bureau in Prince Rupert was left with only one reporter who fed stories into the radio newsroom in Vancouver.

That presence began to drop off last year when the reporter spent more time working out of the Vancouver newsroom.

CBC official Susan Englebert says that the transfer south of the news reporter shouldn't be taken as a sign that the corporation is abandoning the north.

"We still have the shared morning show and we will be able to move our resources around the province," she said.

One plan under consideration is having morning show employees also do news stories.

"The CBC would like to have its workforce be more flexible," Englebert added.

But having a morning show person also do a news story would cross over union jurisdictional lines and that still hasn't been ironed out yet in contract talks between the CBC and its workers.

As it is, CBC employees are scheduled to hold strike votes beginning April 22.

Englebert said the CBC Radio will fill its vacant news position in Prince George and does have a temporary person there now.

When filled, that reporter could cover stories in the northwest if need be, she said.

MOTORISTS WHO have already paid their 1996 ICBC insurance rates can look forward to a refund in the next while.

And those who need to renew their policies won't be paying as much as they first thought.

That's the word from the provincial government's insurance corporation in response to the announcement two weeks ago of a freeze on 1996 rates.

The freeze rolls back a planned 1.5 per cent rate increase for 1996 to the level it was in 1995.

And the rollback applies even to those motorists who enjoyed other rate discounts announced late last year.

"The reduction will apply to all ICBC vehicle coverage," a corporation press release stated recently.

And it'll apply to garage policies bought by auto dealers, repair and service shops.

For those expecting refunds, the amount will be $12 if the total policy cost was $800.

The reduction will apply to the approximately 1.2 million motorists who qualified for decreases announced late last year.

Those reductions called for discounts of five per cent for basic and third party coverage and 10 per cent for collision and comprehensive coverage.

But it also applies to those motorists who are paying higher premiums this year because of crashes found to be their fault in 1995 or who have rates go up owing to where they live or the vehicle they drive.

All told there are 2.3 million drivers in B.C. and of that amount, 96 per cent qualify for some sort of rate reduction.

And of that 2.3 million figure, 84 per cent qualify for the basic 40 per cent discount given to claim free drivers.

Only four per cent of drivers in B.C. do not qualify for rate discounts.

Kitimat an unhappy camper over education merger deal

By CRIS LEYKAUF

DESPITE A lot of kicking and screaming from Kitimat, the merger of the Terrace and Kitimat school districts is now a done deal.

The merger was announced last week amidst news of amalgamations of 32 other districts.

By December this year the number of school districts across the province will be 57, down from 75. The government's original target was to reduce the number of school districts to 37.

The Terrace school district was supposed to combine with both Stikine and Kitimat under that arrangement.

But the geographic size of that combined district would have made it unmanageable.

But merging Terrace and Kitimat appeared to make sense to a provincial government committee set up to look at merger issues around the province.

"It's not appreciated by me, but it's certainly not unexpected," said MLA Helmut Giesbrecht last week.

"It appears according to the report, we were corralled in the first screen," he said, meaning that the districts were likely candidates for amalgamation from the start.

Giesbrecht doesn't think parents will notice any difference in the education their children receive. And unlike the first amalgamation plan, there will be no cuts in the budget to spending on special needs or aboriginal students.

"An upper layer of administration was removed. It shouldn't make any difference," said Giesbrecht.

However there will be considerably fewer trustees in the new merged district.

Terrace now has nine trustees while Kitimat has seven. The new district will likely have seven to nine trustees, says Terrace trustee Stew Christensen.

He admits there is some concern about trustees being stretched too thin in the new district which will stretch from Stewart to Kemano and from Terrace to Hazelton.

The amalgamation also means there will be some job losses in administrative offices. Christensen has no idea yet how many jobs will be lost, and how that job loss will be divided between Terrace and Kitimat.

Giesbrecht predicts that at the very least, 11 people will no longer be required.

"I was a bit angry and felt powerless, a lot like I felt when Harcourt cancelled Kemano II," said George Nuemann, Kitimat's school district chair.

"They'll have to figure out ways to merge seniority lists. There's some tough decisions to make," said Giesbrecht.

Kitimat school board members seem to be more upset than their Terrace counterparts by the announcement of the pending merger.

"I was a bit angry and felt powerless, a lot like I felt when Harcourt cancelled Kemano II," said George Nuemann, Kitimat's school district chair.

Skeena Liberal candidate Rick Wozney, also the mayor of Kitimat, was much more critical. He doesn't feel there was adequate consultation with the public, and says the amalgamation is being rushed through for political reasons.

Giesbrecht admitted that not a lot of people are happy with the news of amalgamation.

"Nobody likes change," he said. "The pressure is there to do more with less. Less bureaucracy, less administration."

Giesbrecht did add that he wasn't happy with the way amalgamation was presented to the public.

"What troubled most of us was that when the (initial) announcement was made, not a lot of thought was given to the default numbers of position... An awful lot of anxiety was caused," said Giesbrecht.

Much of that anxiety was in Kitimat, where the community is very proud of its school board, he said.

"They're not too happy about changing it. And I don't really blame them," Giesbrecht added. "But it might be nice to have some fresh faces here (in Terrace)."

During the first year of amalgamation — 1996/97 the boards will get the same money they did prior to amalgamation. That will give the boards money to afford severance pay and buy-out packages.

Over the following three years, boards will see their budgets increasingly cut, through savings from amalgamation and other cost-saving measures.

Goodbye

WELCOME to my valedictory column.

Over the course of the past year I've written about Terrace's finest community resource — our public library.

Well, okay, I haven't really. I mean, I set out to originally. Each and every month something new.

Imagine — "You and the Pamphlet File." Or — "Inter-library Loans and an Empty Social Calendar." What stimulating columns they could have been.

Then two strange things happened. I hijacked my own column. I started telling you about my trips and my CD's, my foods and my friends.

Last month when I actually wrote a library-centered column, I realized how far I had veered off the path. Given a few more months, the ostensibly library-related column would have focused on my recurring dream where I wander through the Cornett Building at UVic, agonizing over a term paper I'd put off for far too long.

I think that the Standard had originally hoped for some sort of a book review column. I hope I haven't disappointed them.

It's just that it's become rather tedious trying to work up five hundred words on an aspect of a facility that is open six days a week for hands-on public scrutiny.

Already in 1996 we've had three consecutive months with circulation greater than 20,000. Splendid. Let's keep it up, shall we.

I would prefer that you come down and discover our services yourselves. And in the meantime I could move on to write about Bluebacks Swim Club or something else instead. About my dreams.

Besides, that photograph of me is vile. And I never could find a way to use the word "chthonic" in a column.

Before I go, however, a few last bits of business.

Do, please, continue to use the library. Already in 1996 we've had three consecutive months with circulation greater than 20,000. Splendid. Let's keep it up, shall we.

Don't accept any inadequacies you may encounter at the library. Let us know. Let city council know. Checking out books is all very fine, but involvement is better. We so seldom have any patrons attend our meetings, especially the annual general meeting.

Despite the great use of our services, this public no-show demonstrates an unfortunate level of community apathy. Meeting times are 7:30 p.m., the third Thursday of the month. The AGM is advertised in the newspaper.

Read. Buy books, borrow books. Encounter ideas and language. Learn to confront, defuse, appreciate, assimilate, or even manipulate the two.

A book in itself cannot physically damage you (save for a paper cut, I suppose). Nor can an idea. Don't be afraid of them.

I do have a mother. She does not burn pancakes.

I charge you, then, to become passionate about your library. I may now relinquish my obligation to this newspaper, but the library remains with me. Do not ever forget that you, too, have an obligation to it. Enjoy it, please.

Volunteer of the Year
Final nominees announced

IN PROMOTING a feature like Volunteer of the Year, it's humbling to realize how many giving, caring people live here, donating their time and energy to help others.

We'd like to thank everyone who participated in this contest, letting us know about those volunteers who do so much for Terrace. Without your nominations, we would not have had a chance to publicly thank these volunteers.

Below are the final entries in the Terrace Standard/Overwaitea Volunteer of the Year contest.

The winner and two honourable mentions will be announced at a luncheon Friday, put on by the Volunteer Bureau. We'll also be featuring them in next Wednesday's paper.

In total there have been 24 nominations for Volunteer of the Year. Some of those are repeat nominees, including two for Joan Cox, three for Jim Stainton, two for Linda Van Dale, two for Bill Braam and two for Margaret Cooper.

how Dave Crawley and Keith Gosse describe Gloria West on their nomination form.

The two offered West's name for the work she does with the Volunteer Bureau and with Thornhill Elementary and Copper Mt. Elementary.

For the past three years West has volunteered her time with a number of organizations in Terrace.

She helps out at PACES, an organization which offers support for teen moms, and helps teach students to learn how to read.

West also has been busy helping people on low and fixed incomes fill out their income tax forms.

She also volunteers at the Volunteer Bureau and helped make the Multicultural Dinner a success.

"She cares about kids and is willing to help them and teachers with anything they need."

Joan Cox

A bewildered Joan Cox was confused at her nomination for Volunteer of the Year. Both Gayle Holtom and Barbara Howe wrote in, speaking highly of the work she does with the Special Olympics.

But Cox denied there was anything special in what she does.

"I just like working with them," she says.

When she was five years old, her 20-year-old cousin who was mentally challenged used to come over and play Barbies with her. At the time, Cox never suspected there was anything unusual about her cousin. It's this friendship which spawned both her career and her volunteer work.

Cox works as a special education teacher with the school district, and since 1987 has been involved in Special Olympics in Terrace.

Since then she has served as local coordinator, regional coordinator and secretary treasurer for Special Olympics.

Every Saturday she also goes down to the bowling alley to encourage the special athletes. As well, write Howe, she organizes events, taking care of all the extra details.

"I like being behind the scenes," says Cox. "I don't want any credit for it."

The real heroes are the athletes she explains.

"Maybe I have the ability to help them excel at it, that's all. I'm their cheerleader."

And a better cheerleader couldn't be found, from what Gayle Holtom writes.

"When you ask her about 'her' special athletes, her face lights up," says Holtom.

Addie Ippel

The entire staff at Copper Mt. school got together to nominate Addie Ippel for Volunteer of the Year.

"Addie Ippel has been an active parent volunteer at our school for five years. She has been supportive in all areas such as driving, cooking bulletin boards, working with students individually as well as in groups."

They were very enthusiastic about her support, adding that she is a very positive and visible parent at Copper Mt. throughout the year.

Patricia Woods
Patricia Woods was nominated by Bernard Koblichke for her work with Project Literacy Terrace.

Woods only moved to Terrace two years ago, and already she has immersed herself in the community.

She tutors one literacy student four hours a week, and is taking on another student soon.

"It's really enjoyable, you can see great progress," says Woods.

Woods also volunteers at her daughter's school two afternoons a week, giving children there the chance to practice their reading in a one-on-one situation.

She also helps out with the Reading Writers group one lunch hour every week at Kiti K'Shan.

Her daughter also led her to become involved with Guides, and she's a Brownie leader and the person in charge of public relations. She's also the person you want to talk to if you want some of those delicious Girl Guide cookies which will be on sale soon.

As if that weren't enough Woods is also the treasurer for the Volunteer Bureau and regularly gives staff there computer support, setting up forms and spread sheets for them.

"My husband travels a lot so I like to keep busy."

In between volunteering Woods is taking course work at the college, upgrading her education.

Vivian Rapose

"Vivacious Vivian" is how Nolan Beaudry described Rapose on his nomination form.

Rapose has been an active volunteer since 1987, first joining Block Parents and Big Brothers and Sisters.

She is a member of the Parents' Advisory Council at her children's school, is a school sports coach and is also active with Mother's March.

Readers might remember Rapose from being nominated for Coach of the Year.

She has a "warm, bubbly personality, and is always positive and ready to help out," writes Beaudry.

Dave Jephson

This is the second year Jephson has been nominated for this honour, and this year it's Bill Braam who nominated him. Braam is also nominated himself.

Jephson is well known throughout Terrace for his volunteer work with Terrace Search and Rescue and Terrace Water Rescue.

He is a past-president of the search and rescue society and is the present chair of the water rescue team. He also serves as the official spokesperson for both.

Jephson is also an active volunteer with the fire department, going "beyond the normal call of duty," writes Braam.

Jephson has also been instrumental in developing Terrace's water rescue team, making it one of the most highly trained water rescue teams in the country. The team is now internationally recognized.

"Dave deserves this honour," writes Jephson.

Bud Smith

Maurizio Basso nominated Smith for his role in developing Hazelton community sports.

"Bud Smith has been active in Hazelton for over 20 years," writes Basso.

"He has been an excellent supporter of our sports team, but more importantly Bud has been a person you can count on."

Smith has served as a referee for volleyball, basketball and more. He also coaches both sports at Hazelton Secondary School.

"Bud gives so much," says Basso, summing up his reason for his nomination.

Gloria West

"A tremendous help" is

Lords and ladies

GRADE 8 STUDENTS at Centennial Christian School capped off their study of medieval times with an old-fashioned banquet. They drank from goblets, ate with the hands and didn't object to a bit of sword play over lunch. The class also studied archery, horseshoes, chess — a game which originated as a way to learn military strategy — as well as medieval poems and songs.

Across the stage

BUTTERFLIES, GOLD-FISH, pussycats, maidens, jesters and princesses will be dancing their way across the stage today and tomorrow during the Pacific Northwest Music Festival.

This fanciful assortment of dancers is actually students from the Flynn School of Ballet.

This is the first festival for the ballet school, opened by Laura Flynn last year.

She has 34 girls competing in the festival, ranging in ages from five to 16. Over half of her students are performing solos, as well as taking part in group dances.

That means Flynn has choreographed an incredible 45 numbers for the festivals.

Many of those numbers are based on characters the girls picked out.

"I find the kids do better if they pick their own character," says Flynn. "It gives them a sense of ownership."

For goldfish duet Flynn put together a series of waving, shimmying movements. In contrast Flynn has the girl who plays the jester sticking out her tongue and wagging her ears.

The girl who dances the part of the tooth fairy puts a tooth under her pillow; the softball player goes up to bat; and the Chinese Doll dances to authentic Chinese music.

The parents were left with the challenge of creating costumes to go along with dances.

As well as choreographing the numbers, Flynn also had to find music for each piece. It's a big job, and though

THESE YOUNG ballerinas chose their own characters for the pieces they'll be performing today at the Pacific NW Music Festival. They're all students from the Flynn School of Ballet.

Flynn seems to be managing well under the stress, she does admit to having one nightmare.

"After the dancers are finished, the adjudicator comes up to me and says, 'those dances were horrible.'"

This isn't the first time Flynn has helped dance students prepare for the music festival, but it is the first time her students have competed as members of her dance school.

Performing at the multi-cultural dinner and at the Terrace Little Theatre television has helped ease pre-competition jitters for both Flynn and her students. The public is welcome to drop by the REM Lee Theatre today and tomorrow to catch the dancers in action.

Women's League turns 50

THE CATHOLIC Women's League in Terrace recently celebrated its 50th anniversary.

The women's league is a national organization which promotes "holiness through service to the people of God."

The Catholic Women's League in Terrace was organized in Terrace on April 6, 1946 under the first president Mrs. Anna Spitzl.

Mrs. Spitzl was president for two years, then Mrs. Carrie Doll took over from 1948-52.

The women's league will be celebrating these first presidents and all the past members during a 50th anniversary dinner this Sunday, April 21 at 5 p.m. at the Veritas school gym. Howard and Marg Cromarty will be catering this dinner.

All members — past, present and future — are invited to attend this special evening. Special guest speakers include Terry Brock of Kitimat and Mr. Turgeon of Prince George.

That same day at 11 a.m. there will be a special mass of the Catholic Women's League members. A reception will follow in the coffee room of the church.

For more information, contact Joan Korpi at 635-5581 or Jean Maroney at 635-2192.

YVONNE MOEN

Everyone should meet in the McDonald's parking lot.

Gather together you family and friends and come down and help to clean up Terrace.

Let's beat last year's total of 108 people and 150 bags of garbage.

For more info call Chris at 638-1049.

Also, I'd like to remind the schools to be ready on April 23 or 24 as the Terrace Beautification Society will have three judges driving around, judging the cleanest school yard.

The winning school will receive a beautiful plaque. So teachers — get your students out there with those garbage bags!

CHALLENGES OF Change '96 is the name of the Terrace and District Teacher's Union two-day conference in Terrace on April 25th and 26th. Approximately 500 teachers and other school staff from the northwest will be in attendance.

This forum will provide a unique opportunity for consultation and discussion with out-of-district speakers and also with other professionals who share the experience of teaching in the north.

The forum covers a wide range of interests from primary to secondary. Topics will include math, science, art, physical education, special needs, language arts, evaluation, music and drama, technology and multicultural education. Well known and respected educators from throughout North America will be present.

Dr. Michael Fullan, who will be speaking Thursday, is recognized for "outstanding contribution to his profession and to teacher education" and as a "researcher/scholar of the highest calibre." He is Dean of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education at the University of Toronto.

Teachers continue to keep on top of educational change by participating in professional development such as this. The resulting benefits are directly felt in the classroom. Terrace and District Teacher's Union is proud to be offering this event in Terrace.

■ Garbage detail

GRADE 4 & 5 students at Cassie Hall wanted to make their school yard cleaner. So they painted these two garbage cans, to persuade students to throw their lunch wrappers in the garbage, rather than on the ground. The students also decided to buy armbands which read "Keep Our School Clean" as a reminder to other students. There will be a school-wide clean-up this week, with prizes for eager cleaners.

Have a nice day

When someone unexpectedly does something nice for you, it can change your whole day for the better.

That's the theory behind two community events the Terrace Pentecostal Church is sponsoring on Saturday, April 20.

From 2-3:30 p.m. church members will be offering a free car wash, and a hot dog and pop give-away behind the church at the corner of Eby and Olson.

At the same time the church is holding another special event in the Skeena Mall, this time geared for children ages nine and under. Tables will be set up with a variety of crafts for children to make. Kids will also have a chance to have their faces painted, and balloons will be handed out.

"We want to let the people of Terrace know that God loves them through the simple acts of washing their cars, providing some food and some fun for their kids, without any strings attached," says Darcy McAlister, association pastor from the church.

Tickets going fast

TERRACE LITTLE Theatre's upcoming production, Night of January 16th by playwright Ayn Rand, has moved from temporary rehearsal space into the Terrace Curling Rink. This courtroom murder mystery set in the 1930s is TLT's final production the 95/96 season. Audience members will get a unique chance to participate as members of the jury.

For the past month rehearsals have been held in the old Terrace Standard building on Lazelle, donated to the group by Highe Surveys. The cast and crew will have three weeks to adjust to their actual performance venue, ample time according to play director Annette Martindale.

Alternate rehearsal space had to be arranged due to the number of plays produced by Terrace Little Theatre this season.

Including the Christmas production, performed by a handful of Terrace's talented youth, TLT entertained us with six productions this season.

With the success of the Applause '96 Telethon last month, the group is closer to its dream of a community arts building with ample rehearsal space.

Performance dates for this season's finale, Night of January 16th are May 2-5 & 9-12. Tickets are available at Uniglobe Travel in the Lazelle Mini-Mall. With two nights already sold out, wanna-be jurors are advised to reserve their seats fast.

MYTH 4.

Canada spends more on education than any other country.

REALITY.

Truth is, Canada placed 9th out of 23 industrialized countries in Elementary and Secondary Education spending in a recent Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) study called "Education at a Glance" 1995.

Our Public Education system is open to all students.

No child is excluded regardless of race, income, or special needs. Our teachers, along with education support workers and other key resources, provide not only the basics but an expanding body of knowledge to help prepare our children for a changing world.

Our neighbourhood schools are now under attack from often misinformed sources. Vital funding and resources hang in the balance. Public Education is worth supporting.

SKEENA ANGLER
ROB BROWN

Spring Steelhead

It's been twenty years since Bill Ashcroft showed me the way to the upper reaches of the Lakelse River. The place has changed a lot since then. The road to the parking area wound under a colonnade of soft woods. The run below Herman Creek was deeper and held more steelhead. The long run below the riffle - the area fishermen call "The Flats" - was so much deeper that wading it at medium water levels was hard; crossing it during high water conditions was out of the question.

I'm not sure if there were more cutthroat there then. There is no question there were more dolly varden char. I recall long spring days when my partners and I caught a dozen dollys for every cutthroat. These outings would often be followed by days when the ration was reversed. Sadly, the dolly days are no more.

For a few of those early years I fished the upper Lakelse for steelhead in the spring months. There is a steelheading ethic that insists the angler must strive to catch bright fish, an imperative spawned by the realization that dark fish make for poor eating as well as poor sport. Steelheaders know that steelhead spend a long time in fresh water (summer runs will begin their race for the spawning beds in August and spawn in May of the next year), and that the fish slow down and stack up. Because of this, the creatures become more vulnerable as the season wears on. In March, April and May, the steelhead move out of the deep pools and lakes and make for the spawning beds. This is the time when they are particularly vulnerable. It is simply unsporting to fish those fish.

I was aware of this ethic twenty years ago. I could see there were ripening fish, but since late winter run fish enter all our rivers in mint condition every spring, I assumed a good number of them would make the short run to the top of the Lakelse.

I was wrong. I hooked plenty of steelhead. The females were gunmetal gray, the males red or black with pronounced kypes. Time after time I set the hook, waited for the hard run of a strong, newly-arrived fish only to be disappointed by the lackluster fight of an aged summer run steelhead.

During that time I saw other anglers beach fish, none of them fresh. I compared notes with other avid steelheaders. Their experiences with the upper Lakelse steelhead mirrored mine. Convinced there were few, if any, bright steelhead in the upper Lakelse in the spring months, I began spending my time on rivers where I could find them.

A few years ago Doug Webb erected a sign on the trail to Herman's Point welcoming anglers to the river, alerting them to the fact that the river is a prime spawning area for steelhead and urging fishers not to harass those fish. Doug's sign would have saved me a lot of trouble had it been up twenty years ago.

Despite the sign, some fishers are still striking out for the upper Lakelse with the express purpose of hooking steelhead that have crossed the goal line and deserve to be left alone. Three weeks ago Webb and I watched from our canoe as two fishermen using heavily weighted flies and strike indicators, goaded ripe steelhead.

I picked up my binoculars and watched when one of the men provoked a strike. Every word they uttered skittered across the cold water and reached us with remarkable clarity. "Oh, he's a big one. I'll need some help!" yelled the provocateur. "He wouldn't take a stone fly nymph so I changed to an weighted egg pattern," he boasted.

I checked my watch then watched. The man pulled. The fish pulled. It was over twenty minutes before he had the animal ashore and aloft for a snapshot. The fish was a big male, perhaps fourteen pounds, and as red as rhubarb. "How big do you think it is?" asked the photographer. "Seventeen pounds easy," said the egg fisher.

I'm told this targeting of black fish on the Lakelse is a growing phenomenon. I hope it isn't because I know for a fact that the people who make the regulations for our fresh water fisheries believe that dragging dark steelhead around by the lip decreases their chance of survival. I know too, that if the problem continues they will simply close the area to fishing until the steelhead have spawned. That would be a shame for we trout hounds would lose April and May, the best months for cutthroat fishing on the upper Lakelse River.

PROUD WINNERS! Dan Fisher's Terrace rink took first place in the B Event at the Logger's Bonspiel on the Easter weekend. Terrace's Keith Melanson and Kevin McDougall took top spots in the

Terrace tops three at Loggers

If the result of the A Event final at the Loggers Bonspiel had gone the other way, Gary Habinger's rink could have pointed to the second end as the turning point.

Having given up a single in the first, the Kitimat rink looked like it was going to grab a game breaking lead in the next.

However, facing four Habinger counters with his first rock, Houston's Klaus Kraft pulled off a superb triple takeout to stave off potential disaster.

And when Habinger missed with his hammer delivery, Kraft's quartet found itself 2-0 up instead of trying to play catch up against one of the best hitting teams at the Terrace 'spiel.

But patience is the hallmark of Habinger's play and it has delivered numerous event titles over 33 consecutive years in the Loggers. It was to do so again this time.

After tying the score in the third, the quartet of Rob Fraser at lead, second Tony Abriel, third Wolf DeSmet and Habinger finally took the lead with a deuce in the eighth.

Kraft blanked the next to retain the hammer for the final end but this time it was his turn to blow one by, allowing Habinger to steal two more for a 7-4 victory.

Meanwhile one sheet over, Rick McDougall's Kemano team needed an extra end to nail down the D Event title.

After giving up a steal of two on the third to go 3-1 down, McDougall, lead John Rilkoff, second Don Timlick and third Malcolm Hill grabbed back-to-back singles to tie it after five.

After Smithers opponent Phil Leroux blanked the next, McDougall pulled off another singleton steal in the seventh to lead 4-3.

Leroux continued looking for the big end but the Kemano quartet weren't about to let it happen. After blanking both the next two, Leroux was forced to settle for a single in the tenth to force the extra end where McDougall came through with the point needed for victory.

Among those cheering McDougall on was his son Kevin who had just guided his Terrace rink to an 8-3, six-end triumph in E Event over Greg Morgan of Kitwanga.

And there was a Kitimat connection in that game, Tracy Hittel playing third for Morgan.

A total of 45 teams took part in the four-day Easter weekend bonspiel.

Linnae Bee

Joe Dominguez

College hoops
Looking to their futures

TWO CALEDONIA high school students were among only 60 in the province to receive a $500 dollar scholarship in a presentation at a Grizzlies game at GM Place on April 7.

Linnae Bee and Joseph Dominguez have each been awarded a scholarship through the BEST (Basketball Education Scholarship Team) program.

The scholarships are funded through McDonald's Canada and the Vancouver Grizzlies, and there are only 60 awarded each year; 30 for boys and 30 for girls.

"I was honoured to get one because so few are given out," says Bee.

The scholarships are awarded to top basketball players who also do well academically and who are involved in their community.

She says it was very exciting to be part of the half time show at the GrizzliesSuns game, and adds it was a good game even though Vancouver lost.

Bee says she's looking seriously at going to Grand Prairie College in Alberta to pursue basketball.

"I've heard they have an excellent coach and a very good program there," she says.

She wants to study biochemistry and eventually go into medicine.

Dominguez was also very excited to find out he'd won a scholarship.

"I was surprised because only 30 boys get one," he says. "It was kinda cool."

Grand Prairie college is among those he's considering.

He says he's also waiting to hear from the University of Lethbridge.

Dominguez plans to study P.E. and math eventually hopes to become a teacher.

Unfortunately he couldn't go Vancouver because he was at a basketball camp in Edmonton.

FIELDS!

Or this could happen to you. This truck was pouring cement for backstops at the new ball diamonds at Cassie Hall when it became mired in the mud. Steve Scott, the city's superintendent of parks and recreation, is urging everyone to stay off the playing fields until further notice. He says the ground is very soft and the grass isn't growing. Using the fields now, he says, would only worsen the situation. Scott says it's going to take one full week of dry, warm weather to see the situation improve.

Over hill and dale

IT'S A race to the top.

The top of Shames mountain that is. The Skeena Valley Snowmobile Association is putting on a "hill-climb" on April 21 for anyone who's interested. Local snowmobiler Ron Niesner says each racer will try to beat the clock or get to the highest point they can on the mountain.

There will be cash prizes for the three people who reach the highest point.

The course will be set out on an area that's primarily moguls.

There is an entry fee and you can sign up in various classes on the day of the competition.

Or you can pre-register until Friday at Ken's Marine.

Racing action starts at 11 a.m.

There are already well over 30 people signed up.

For more information you can contact Trevor Gibson at 635-2909 or Niesner at 635-3123.

Niesner also points out this'll be a money making opportunity for Shames as there will be concessions set up on the mountain.

And, he says, this is an excellent spectator sport.

Just bring along a lawnchair and sunscreen.

It'll cost adults $5 to take in the fun. Children 12 and up are $2.

For snowmobilers who are still taking advantage of early spring snow, Niesner warns that this is dangerous time of year.

"Spring thaws lead to a high avalanche risk," he says.

"And there are still quite a few snowmobilers out there."

The BC Snowmobile Federation advises it's wise to always travel with a buddy and avoid going out at night.

Avalanches have killed 11 snowmobilers in BC and Alberta in the past two years.

Champs!

THE TERRACE badminton club has wrapped up play for the season with an open tournament. Six Terrace players; Dave Munro, Norm Parry, Karen Resch, Mary-Louise Crespo, Henri Michaud and Nancy Condon, took home first place trophies.

Organizers say new faces are welcome when play resumes in September.

Sport Scope

Northmen set provincial hopes

THE RAINY weather earlier this month has dashed any hopes the Terrace Northmen rugby club had of getting some practice before the provincial championships on Saturday.

The Northmen were scheduled to host Prince Rupert on Easter Friday and travel to Smithers this past Sunday.

Both games were cancelled because of poor field conditions. The games will be made up during the season.

Rugby club president David D. Hall says they'd attempted to jump start the season by scheduling a couple of early games.

Twenty-two Northmen will be going to Richmond for the provincials on Saturday and Sunday.

Fish protection debated

MEMBERS OF the Terrace Sportfish Advisory Board are working towards protecting the fish in the upper Copper River.

The board has made a motion for an angling closure from the Clore River upstream from December 31 to June 15.

Chair Greg Ross says there is a lot of steelhead angling in that area, but it is all catch and release.

And he says officials in the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and the Environment Ministry are concerned that the same fish may be getting caught over and over again.

The motion was forwarded to the North Coast meeting.

Local stays strong in US

A LOCAL hockey player is continuing in his winning ways at university.

Defenseman Jason Krug has wrapped up his second year as a member of the Mankato State Mavericks hockey team in Minnesota.

He played 31 games and finished with nine goals and 17 assists. That's up from six goals and 15 assists in his rookie year.

Krug is the Mavericks assistant captain and earned honourable mention all-American honours on the NCAA division II sports information directors team.

He tied for third among NCAA division II defensemen in goals and power-play goals. And this past season Krug also became the second defenseman in MSU history to score a hat trick.

Local hoopsters down Rupert

THE CLARENCE Michiel grade 7 boys basketball team may very well be tops in the northwest.

The boys beat the Prince Rupert champions, Annunciation Elementary, in two straight games.

The first was a decisive victory for Clarence Michiel, 58-38, but the second game wasn't quite as easy.

Annunciation fought back, losing by just two points, 49-47.

Coach Grant Holkestad went with the boys on the road trip.

One week and counting

YOU HAVE exactly one week left to sign up for the Terrace men's soccer league.

You can register until 4:30 p.m. April 24, at the arena recreation office.

The fee is $50 and all players are welcome.

For more information, call Lorenzo at 635-7871.

And the 18th annual Milk goes at Caledonia in one week time.

Donations can be sent to the school. All money raised goes to the BC Epilepsy Society and the BC Sport and Fitness Council for the Disabled.

MLA REPORT

The BC government gets top marks from financial experts.

The Investment Dealers' Association of Canada reports "BC's finances have steadily improved over the past four years... BC has maintained the highest credit ratings in the country."

And the Dominion Bond Rating Service confirms BC's "debt levels remain the lowest in Canada."

INTEGRATED HEALTH CARE SERVICES
Mills Memorial Hospital

Is it a REAL Medical Emergency?

Use Your Emergency Department Wisely

Your hospital EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT is organized for sudden, serious health problems. The hospital has a fixed budget, however, and unnecessary use of the emergency department diverts resources from other areas of the hospital. The same service provided in the doctor's office is much cheaper than if provided in the Emergency Department. It should not be used as a substitute for visits to your doctor's office.

Doctors' Office Versus Emergency Visit

If you have an ongoing medical problem that has not suddenly affected your well being, you should arrange to see your doctor in the office. If you are seriously injured or are suddenly taken ill, the EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT is where you belong.

What If You Don't Have a Doctor?

Plan to have a family doctor before an emergency occurs. Family doctors' office number in Terrace are listed in the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory under "Physicians & Surgeons." The EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT staff cannot recommend the name of a doctor to choose.

When It Really Is An Emergency

When you have a real emergency, bring the patient to the EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT, promptly, using ambulance services if necessary. Emergency room nurses are also not allowed to give medical advice over the phone. EMERGENCY patients are assessed on arrival and those with serious and/or life threatening problems are seen first. The hospital does not have on site emergency physicians. In a real emergency "on-call" doctors are available.

Appropriate Use of Your Emergency Department Ensures That Our Doctors and Nurses Can Treat You Promptly In A Real Emergency!

If you are using hospital services PLEASE remember to bring your CARE CARD to prevent delays.

Tenders must be submitted on the form and in the envelopes supplied which, with the particulars, may be obtained at the time of the viewing from the Forest Officer conducting the viewing trip.

Tenders will not be considered having any qualifying clauses whatsoever and the lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted. The work will be administered by the British Columbia Ministry of Forests.

All inquiries should be directed to Mike Watts, Forest Technician-Contract Co-ordinator, at the above address. Phone 638-5100.

Contract award is subject to funding being available at the time.

Before
you burn...

...make sure
you can!

Outdoor burning is routinely
banned in July and August, and you may need a burning permit at other times of the year.

Please check with your local Forest Service office before you burn yard refuse, tree prunings and other material on private land that is not covered by municipal or regional district burning by-laws.

Any burning related to land clearing, prescribed fires and industrial burning requires a Forest Service burning permit.
Contact the nearest Forest Service office for burning permits and further information.

Please help prevent wildfires.
